BLACKBURN'S POSITION.

In corroboration of our view expressed in the last YEOMAN that Mr. Blackburn had not and would not enter into any arrangement with Mr. Randall or any other person to secure the Speakership, we publish the following interview from the Courier-Journal's Washington correspondence of yesterday.

Ignoring the issue between him and Mr. Carlisle upon the point of courtesy and rivalry, we recognize the fact that supposed position on the Mississippi river he has a substantial following, at home principle represented by Mr. Randall. That he could enter into an arrangement with Randall to secure an election over Carlisle, we knew was impossible. Those who know Blackburn best will readily understand that he would rather give up his seat in Congress than accept the Speakership or any other distinction

But it would save a great deal of trouble; there are many reasons in its favor, and there is no opposition to it; and those considerations may fairly claim for it the earnest attention of Congress. Few appropriation bills are passed that do not contain items which the Executive has good reasons for disapproving -items which a majority of the members of the two houses themselves do not approve, and which secure position in the bill only through infew votes. This is particularly the case with river and harbor appropriation bills.

Invariably, these are loaded down with appropriations for improving insignificant and unnavigable creeks and harbors unknown outside the Congressional District in which they are situated; and anxious as the Executive may be to veto these worse than useless expenditures, he cannot do so without vetoing the whole bill. Many States and large cities provide that the Executive may distinguish between the items in an appropriation bill, and approve and disapprove them at his discretion—and the rule is declared to work great satisfaction. The extravagance it would prevent in the national expenditures entitles it to favorable consideration.

His childhood was passed upon the bright sands of the sea-shore and in the cool shades of the palm groves. He learned early to make stick-horses of the jointed bamboo, to gather caoutchouc from the urceola elastica, and to bring down the chattering parrots and birds of Paradise with his unfailing boomerang. He gathered cocoanuts, dates, and the small fruits of the island upon which he lived, until he became a noted rival of the great tribe of what the Portugese call Mongooz, known in English as monkeys. At the tender age of twelve years he was one day "walking thoughtful upon the shore," his garments consisting of a beautiful string of sharks' teeth, which he wore about his neck, a bracelet of periwinkles upon his right arm, and a small lignum vitæ boomerang under his left, when he attracted the at-Selbert's Seth Thomas Cathedral-bell tention and admiration of the Queen her cousin, one of the chiefs of the Selbert's the jeweler. The following is one of the very many testimonials we are receiving daily:

Gentlemen:—Some three months ago I began the use of Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic, upon the advice of many friends who knew its virtnes. I was suffering from general debility to such an extent that my labor was exceedingly burdensome to me. A vacation of a month did not give me much relief, but on the contrary, was followed by increased prostration and sinking chills. At this time I began the use of your Iron Tonic, from which I realized almost immediate and wonderful results. The old energy returned and I found that my natural force was not permanently abated. I have used three bottles of the Tonic. Since using it I have done twice the labor that I ever did in the same time during my illness, and with double the ease. With the tranquil nerve and vigor of body, has come also a clearness of thought never before enjoyed. If the Tonic has not done the work, I know not what. I give it the credit.
